Where People & Opportunity Meet

What's consumer consent?

Consumer consent is your authorization for a credit grantor to view your employment and income information. Most often, you provide this consent when signing a loan application, lease agreement, or similar document when requesting a service or benefit. That consent is generally good for the life of the obligation (until the loan is repaid or the account is closed, etc.) which gives the credit grantor the option to re-check your employment and income status as part of their ongoing account review process. Consumer consent can be in the form of an ink signature, an electronic signature, or a salary key.

Here's How It Works

1. CSS's payroll department securely transmits employment and income data to The Work Number on a regular cycle, so the information remains current.
2. When you apply for credit or other services where proof of employment or income is required, you provide consent to the credit grantor to verify that information when signing the application.
3. The verifier—who has been carefully screened and credentialed before gaining access to the system—uses the CSS employer code: 12333 and your Social Security Number to look up your record on The Work Number database.

The Work Number is the #1 Employment Verification Service, helping you rapidly obtain the credit you deserve.
